Are you concerned about where the financial services industry is heading as a result of the subprime crisis, global credit crunch, and the fall of Bear Stearns? Join the FWA to hear from a panel of government relations professionals from major global banks and Wall Street firms who will share their views about the current regulatory and legislative climate.

Our distinguished panel members are all based in Washington D.C. and share years of experience in dealing with the Congress and U.S. lawmakers. This promises to be an enlightening and thought-provoking discussion about pending legislation and current issues that will shape the financial services industry in the future.

This is a "must attend" for anyone with an interest in the critical events impacting today's financial markets.
